

The Blueprint: Homepage Wireframe

Project 2 · UI/UX Design · DecodeLabs · Low-fidelity, black, white and grey only

|                                                                                                       |                                                                                    |                                                                                      |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Problem Cluttered layout is confusing shoppers and they abandon before checkout. | Goal Pass the 5-second test: what is sold, and how to buy it. | Scope Homepage (desktop and mobile) with a clear CTA hierarchy. |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|

User flow

The homepage has one job: move a visitor to a product with the fewest decisions.

Desktop homepage (1200px layout)

Numbers match the annotations below. Placeholders are boxes with an X, text is represented by grey bars.

IMG

Category 1

IMG

Category 2

IMG

Category 3

IMG

Category 4

IMG

Category 5

6

Best sellers

View all best sellers

PRODUCT

Product name

★★★★☆

$00.00

Add to Cart

PRODUCT

Product name

★★★★☆

$00.00

Add to Cart

PRODUCT

Product name

★★★★☆

$00.00

Add to Cart

PRODUCT

Product name

★★★★☆

$00.00

Add to Cart

7

Value point 1

Value point 2

Value point 3

Learn More

8

What customers say

★★★★★

Name

★★★★★

Name

★★★★★

Name

9

Closing statement

Buy Now

10

Shop

Help

Company

Newsletter

Email

1

Utility bar

Shipping and returns shown early to remove cost doubt.

2

Header

Logo left, wide search, cart right. Four nav items only to limit choice overload.

3

Hero (primary CTA)

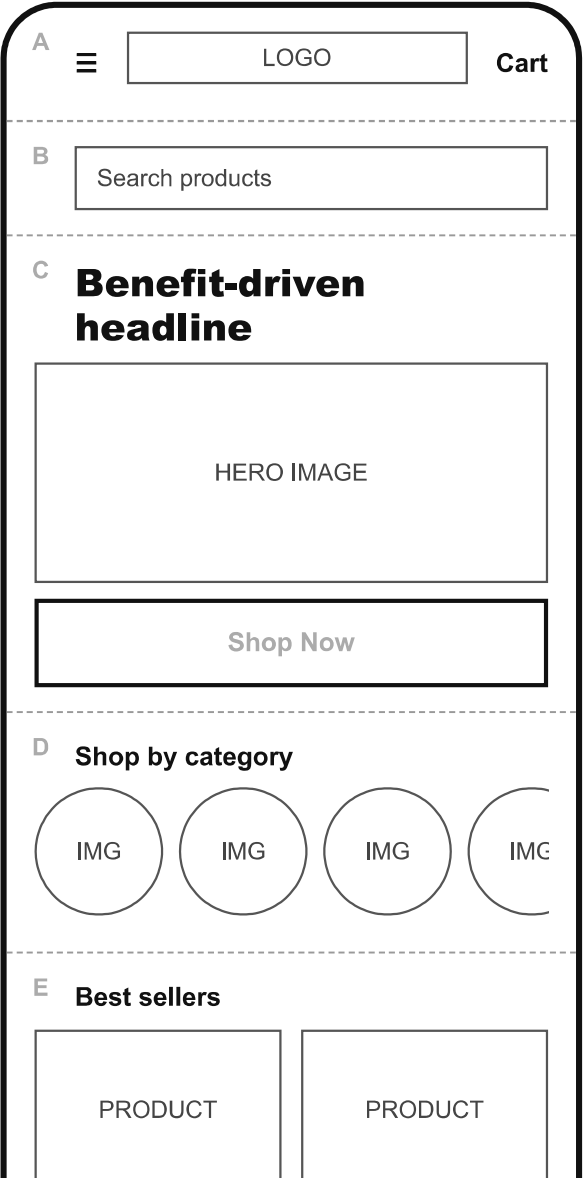

4

Trust strip

|   |                                                                                                            |    |                                                                                                                           |
|---|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
|   | One benefit headline and one filled Shop Now button. Secondary action is a text link so it never competes. |    | Three short reassurances before the user scrolls.                                                                         |
| 5 | Category shortcutsVisual tiles, not text links. Maximum five, so decisions stay easy.           | 6  | Best sellersSocial proof (stars) and price on every card. "Add to Cart" is the only filled button in the grid. |
| 7 | Value stack (mid-page CTA)Outlined "Learn More" re-engages users who need more reasons.         | 8  | ReviewsReal customer proof placed just before the closing CTA.                                                 |
| 9 | Closing CTA"Buy Now" for users who scrolled the whole page and are convinced.                   | 10 | FooterHelp and policies in the last position, newsletter signup as a low-priority action.                      |

Mobile homepage (390px layout)

Same hierarchy, single column, with the primary CTA kept in thumb reach.

|   |                                                                                      |
|---|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| A | Compact headerMenu, logo and cart only.                                   |
| B | Search firstFull-width and above the hero because mobile shoppers search. |
| C | HeroHeadline, image, then a full-width button (minimum 44px tap target).  |
| D | Swipeable categoriesHorizontal row saves vertical space.                  |
| E | Two-column productsFewer items per row so every product is readable.      |
| F | Sticky CTAStays at the bottom, within thumb reach, while scrolling.       |

CTA hierarchy

Three button styles only, so users always know what matters most.

Shop Now

Primary: filled black. One per view.

Learn More

Secondary: outlined.

See what's new

Tertiary: text link.

Design decisions

| Principle               | How it is applied                                                                             |
|-------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Z-pattern scan          | Logo, nav and search across the top, diagonal through the hero, ending on the CTA button.     |
| Reduce cognitive load   | Four nav items, five categories, four best sellers. Whitespace separates each block.          |
| Strategic CTA placement | Above the fold (Shop Now), mid-page (Learn More), end of page (Buy Now), sticky on mobile.    |
| Trust before checkout   | Shipping, returns, security and reviews appear before the user commits.                       |
| Next step: checkout     | Cart review followed by guest checkout, with no forced sign-up and a hidden promo code field. |

